Goodbye Root Sports, Hello Sportsnet!

Root Sports will be rebranded to AT&T Sportsnet.

AT&T Sports Networks announced that the company's regional sports network brand – ROOT SPORTS® – will be rebranded as AT&T SportsNet<sup>SM</sup> in the Pittsburgh, Rocky Mountain and Southwest regions.

The new AT&T SportsNet<sup>SM</sup> brand will continue the same passionate, local sports coverage while reflecting a new legacy of growth under the AT&T brand.

"We have always brought an authentic and personal level of coverage to all of our teams, because as fans, we also know the history and feel the rivalries," said Bill Roberts, head of content for AT&T Sports Networks. "And while we have that same undying commitment to quality, this rebrand will help us heighten the experience as we transform our visual effects capabilities further."

The new AT&T SportsNet<sup>SM</sup> brand promises to keep the same authentic local sports coverage while pursuing more enhanced storytelling. As always, the network will continue to be the trusted connection to our teams, players, sponsors, and viewers. When the networks officially transition to AT&T SportsNet<sup>SM</sup>, all of the existing team partnerships and programming will remain intact.

This transition is scheduled to take place on July 14th, 2017.
